The Procter & Gamble Company hosted its annual supplier awards event on November 3, 2009 to recognize the company's top performing suppliers. Interscope Manufacturing, located in Middletown, OH, was among the top 55 suppliers invited out of the 80,000 suppliers Procter & Gamble relies on each day.

Interscope was recognized for their world-class capability by being awarded the 2009 Corporate Supplier Excellence Award. Interscope received consistent, high marks in broad based quantitative and qualitative evaluations by P&G employees throughout the supply chain.

Scott Brotherton, Interscope Manufacturing's Chief Operating Officer, commented, "We are thrilled to be recognized by P&G for our efforts over the last year. We have seen great success in the projects we have collaborated on and expect much more to come. We are continuously looking for opportunities to improve our service levels and capabilities to better mirror the needs of our customers. We see nothing but opportunities on the horizon and have added contract manufacturing and packaging to our core competencies."

"P&G's growth strategy is to touch and improve more consumers' lives in more parts of the world more completely," said Bob McDonald, P&G's president and chief executive officer, while speaking to suppliers attending the Company's annual supplier awards dinner. "This strategy is inspired by P&G's Purpose, and it can only be executed in partnership with our suppliers. We are all focused on touching and improving lives, which requires us - together -- to innovate, to streamline and improve the supply chain, to simplify the way we work, and to create sustainable solutions that improve lives today and for generations to come."
